Miss Cox and Cheetham were thrown constantly into each other's company at the tennis court, and a short time ago their engagement was announced. One day last week the Tennis Club gave a swell reception at the Quincy pariors on the Heights, and the eccentric conduct of Cheetham is said, to have caused unfavorable comment.

Miss Cox says that he was grossly intoxicated, and that his conduct towards her was insulting. The next day she sent for the young man and told him in emphalic terms that all was over between them.

Since that time, Miss Cox says, her ex-sweetheart has constantly tormented her. He met her on the street on one occasion, she says, and remarked glooming the country place at Belmont, N. J., to-morrow, but has learned that Cheetham knows of her plan and expressed his determination to follow her. When she came to court this morning Miss Cox was accompanied by a young Miss Cox and Cheetham were thrown constantly into account, and a short time ago their engagement constantly into account, and a short time ago their engagement was announced.

After being forced out of the liquos business he took apartments with Mrs. Rang, in the Seventy-sixth street house and, until a short time ago, paid his rent regularly.

Then he began to fall behind and at the time of the suicide he owed the landlady $15. She repeatedly asked him for the money, and when she dunned him again last night he said he would have it for her by 8 o'clock this morning.

When she pounded on his door shortly after the hour named, and received no response, Mrs. Rang entered, and found Kruse lying on a bed in a dying condition.

She at once notified Policeman Bagley, who was on post. Kruse was breathing at the time of the latter's arrival, but died before the arrival of an ambulance.
